Load Management Switch is:

A device that Hendricks Power Cooperative uses to control our peak consumption times. If all of our customers together use slightly more electricity than planned, Hendricks Power sends out a radio-control signal to the switch, limiting the power that the water heater uses for 20-30 minutes.

This allows Hendricks Power Cooperative to avoid purchasing additional electricity at extremely high market prices. Ultimately, this is a savings to the end-user.

The water heater will come back on automatically. Since the water heaters are well insulated, the temperature of the water will change very little, if at all.
